

Rémi Van Peteghem has been appointed Executive Chef at Le Royal Monceau – Raffles Paris

November 2016: Aaron Kaupp, General Manager at Le Royal Monceau – Raffles Paris, announces the appointment of Rémi Van Peteghem as Executive Chef.

With more than 20 years of experience working at Michelin-starred restaurants, Rémi Van Peteghem joins the culinary team at the Parisian palace to take up a new challenge. He will oversee the Japanese restaurant Matsuhisa Paris, the Italian Michelin-star restaurant Il Carpaccio, Le Bar Long, and room service as well as banquets and receptions.

As a true ambassador of French cuisine, he has developed his culinary 'savoir-faire' in the most prestigious French restaurants. He started his career at 16 years-old, as a student at the Ferrandi School. Thereafter, he has operated in many high-standing gastronomic restaurants. In 2006, Guy Martin gave him the opportunity to take the lead of the restaurant Le Sensing for its grand opening, where he then became Chef and earned his first star in the Michelin guide.

After enhancing his culinary experience, Rémi decided to add an international dimension to his career in 2011, joining the team of the Peninsula Hong Kong as Chef of Gaddi's restaurant for 3 years. He then moved to New York where he became Executive Sous Chef of the Peninsula.

He has been named "Jeune talent de demain/Young talent" twice by Gault & Millau, in 2008 and 2011. In 2015, he was a finalist at the Meilleur Ouvrier de France competition for best craftsmen.

After having developed his management skills abroad, Rémi Van Peteghem, who is keen on French gastronomy, became the new Executive Chef at the Parisian palace.

Aaron Kaupp is proud of this appointment: "We are delighted to welcome Rémi amongst the team of Le Royal Monceau - Raffles Paris. His knowledge of French cuisine executed brilliantly with new techniques, his dynamism and his leadership will be valuable assets to manage the kitchens of the palace."
